It's about time that this matter is put to rest. For almost four years, DOJ has danced with industry advocates that are trying to succeed in the court of law because they fail daily in the enterprise markets. The people vote with their wallets and they support Microsoft products. Just imagine if the government were to improve its products annually, increase its service and features and then charge less every year for it. Will never happen, that's why government proponents are so desperate to derail Microsoft. How much damage can you guy do to our economy?
